Designer insight ANA ENGELHORN

The interior designer, a member of The List, discusses her career choice, a recent project and her dream design brief with Leanne Walstow

Being an interior designer is not my first profession, but houses have always been an important part of my life. Wherever I lived or travelled, I would buy, redo and sell properties, some of which were featured in design magazines. When I was pregnant with my second child, I took the opportunity to study interior design and made the career switch. My latest project was the transformation of a period property in Chelsea – we repainted the house in rich, warm colours, uncovered the original 200-year-old floorboards and filled the rooms with beautiful furnishings and art. My favourite projects are period buildings in London; I love working with craftspeople to restore traditional plasterwork and make the most of the beautiful high ceilings with cornices and chandeliers.
